Magnolia Crossing was developed by Innovative Development and Living Solutions of California (IDLS), a local nonprofit dedicated to creating equitable housing for older adults. The project emerged through a public-private partnership with the City of Clovis and national funders, and pioneered the use of Federal New Markets Tax Credit funding for construction of assisted living projects on the West Coast.

Since opening in 2018, Magnolia Crossing has upheld its mission to serve seniors of all incomes, establishing one of the region's first mixed-income assisted living communities. Its small-home design creates a warm, residential environment that avoids the institutional feel common in traditional senior facilities.

Reaching full occupancy is a major achievement—especially as the senior population and need for care continues to grow rapidly. Magnolia Crossing's success reflects the strength of its model and the dedication of its staff, leadership, and partners.

Clovis Mayor Vong Mouanoutoua will speak at the event, along with other state and local officials, community partners, and supporters.

Media are invited to attend and help share this powerful story of community investment, innovation, and service to seniors across the region.
